Cancer treatment and curative research are constantly making advances that are changing the face of cancer worldwide. Despite these advances, the number of people who will be touched by cancer, either as patients or caregivers, will continue to grow...as will their need for the unique support massage therapy can provide. Modern medicine has become increasingly high-tech. As such, it has inevitably become increasingly low-touch. Oncology massage therapists address this increasing need for touch. We share an uncommon interest in providing the unique, compassionate, highly specialized care required by clients during every step of the cancer journey. We are a committed, team-oriented community of therapists whose primary goal is to ensure that all those touched by cancer have access to safe, caring massage therapy provided by properly trained therapists.
